House Bill 687
Judiciary

(Delegate Wilson, et al.)

Civil Actions - Child Sexual Abuse - Statute of Limitations

This bill establishes that an action for damages arising out of an alleged incident or incidents of sexual abuse, as defined in § 5-701 of the Family Law Article, that occurred while the victim was a minor may be filed at any time. The bill may not be construed to apply retroactively to revive any action that was barred by the statutory period of limitation applicable before October 1, 2019.

Fiscal Summary

State Effect: Potential increase in special fund expenditures that occur well into the future if the bill results in payments in claims against the State that would not be allowed to proceed under existing statute. Revenues are not affected.

Local Effect: Potential increase in local expenditures that occur well into the future if the bill results in payments for claims against local government entities, as discussed below. Revenues are not affected.

Small Business Effect: Potential meaningful impact on small business law firms that are able to litigate or proceed with cases as a result of the bill.

Analysis

Current Law: Pursuant to Chapters 12 and 656 of 2017, an action for damages arising out of an alleged incident or incidents of sexual abuse, as defined in § 5-701 of the Family Law Article, that occurred while the victim was a minor must be filed at any time before the victim reaches the age of majority. Such an action may also be filed within the later of 20 years after the date on which the victim reaches the age of majority, or 3 years after the date that the defendant is convicted of a crime relating to the alleged incident or incidents under § 3-602 of the Criminal Law Article (sexual abuse of a minor) or the laws of another state or the United States that would be a crime under § 3-602 of the Criminal Law Article.

However, in an action brought more than seven years after the victim reaches the age of majority, damages may be awarded against a person or governmental entity that is not the alleged perpetrator of the sexual abuse only if (1) the person or governmental entity owed a duty of care to the victim; (2) the person or governmental entity employed or exercised some degree of responsibility or control over the alleged perpetrator; and (3) there is a finding of gross negligence on the part of the person or governmental entity. “Alleged perpetrator” means the individual alleged to have committed the specific incident or incidents of sexual abuse that serve as the basis of an action arising from alleged sexual abuse under § 5-117 of the Courts and Judicial Proceedings Article.

Chapters 12 and 656 include a “statute of repose,” which prohibits a person from filing an action for damages arising out of an alleged incident or incidents of sexual abuse that occurred while the victim was a minor against a person or governmental entity that is not the alleged perpetrator more than 20 years after the date on which the victim reaches the age of majority.

Causes of action filed under the Acts’ provisions are exempt from the notice of claim requirement under Local Government Torts Claim Act (LGTCA) and the submission of a written claim requirement, denial of claim requirement, and the statute of limitations under Maryland Tort Claims Act (MTCA).

Chapters 12 and 656 of 2017 may not be construed to apply retroactively to revive any action that was barred by the statutory period of limitations applicable before October 1, 2017. The statute of repose created by the Acts must be construed to apply both prospectively and retroactively to provide repose to defendants regarding actions that were barred by the statutory period of limitations applicable before October 1, 2017.

Statute of Limitations – In General

In general, the statute of limitations for a civil action requires that a civil action must be filed within three years from the date it accrues unless another statutory provision permits a different period of time within which an action can be commenced. The “discovery rule” is applicable generally in all actions, and the cause of action accrues when the claimant in fact knew or reasonably should have known of the wrong. Poffenberger v. Risser, 290 Md. 631 (1981).

If a cause of action accrues to a minor, the general three-year statute of limitations is tolled until the child reaches the age of majority. Thus, on becoming an adult at age 18, a child victim of a tort other than one involving sexual abuse is required to file the suit before the victim reaches age 21.

Section 5-701 of the Family Law Article

Section 5-701 of the Family Law Article defines “sexual abuse” as (1) any act that involves sexual molestation or exploitation of a child by a parent or other person who has permanent or temporary care or custody or responsibility for supervision of a child, a person who exercises authority over the child because of the person’s position or occupation, or by any household or family member or (2) sex trafficking of a child by any individual. “Sexual abuse” includes (1) allowing or encouraging a child to engage in prostitution or specified activities involving obscene or pornographic photography, (2) human trafficking, (3) incest, (4) rape, (5) sexual offense in any degree, (6) sodomy, and (7) unnatural or perverted sexual practices.

Section 3-602 of the Criminal Law Article

Section 3-602 of the Criminal Law Article prohibits (1) a parent or other person who has permanent or temporary care or custody or responsibility for the supervision of a minor from causing sexual abuse to the minor and (2) a household member or family member from causing sexual abuse to a minor. Violators are guilty of a felony, punishable by imprisonment for up to 25 years. A sentence imposed for this offense may be separate from and consecutive to or concurrent with a sentence for any crime based on the act establishing the violation of § 3-602 or a violation of § 3-601 of the Criminal Law Article (child abuse) involving an act of abuse separate from sexual abuse under § 3-602.

Section 3-602 defines “sexual abuse” as an act that involves sexual molestation or exploitation of a minor, whether physical injuries are sustained or not. “Sexual abuse” includes incest, rape, sexual offense in any degree, sodomy, and unnatural or perverted sexual practices.

Background: In response to growing recognition of the long-term impact of child sexual abuse, approximately 45 states and the District of Columbia have enacted laws that specifically address the statute of limitations for actions to recover damages stemming from this type of abuse. The approaches vary by state, with the simplest and most direct approach extending the limitations period for a civil action based on child sexual abuse for a specified number of years.

A number of state statutes contain a general “discovery” rule that allows any civil claim to proceed within a specific number of years after the injury was or should have been discovered, even if the discovery occurs beyond the expiration of the period of limitations. Other states have a specific discovery rule that tolls the statute of limitations until the abused individual discovers or should have discovered that sexual abuse occurred and that the sexual abuse caused the individual's injuries.

State Expenditures: Special fund expenditures for the State Insurance Trust Fund (SITF) may increase well into the future if the bill results in payments in cases against the State that would be barred under existing statute. General fund expenditures increase for State agencies subject to higher SITF premiums/assessments if SITF incurs losses from MTCA payments as a result of the bill. Whether any such increase occurs and the extent of any such increase cannot be reliably estimated at this time. The bill (1) allows an action for damages arising out of child sexual abuse to be filed at any time and (2) repeals provisions under existing statute limiting causes of action against a person or governmental entity that is not the alleged perpetrator.

MTCA limits State liability to $400,000 to a single claimant for injuries arising from a single incident. In actions involving malice or gross negligence or actions outside of the scope of the public duties of the State employee, the State employee is not shielded by the State's color of authority or sovereign immunity and may be held personally liable.

Agencies pay premiums to SITF that are comprised of an assessment for each employee covered and SITF payments for torts committed by the agency's employees. The portion of the assessment attributable to losses is allocated over five years. The Treasurer is charged with setting premiums "so as to produce funds that approximate the payments from the fund." (See Md. State Fin. & Proc. Code Ann. § 9-106(b).) The actuary assesses SITF's reserves and each agency's loss experience for the various risk categories, which include tort claims and constitutional claims. An agency's loss history, consisting of settlements and judgments incurred since the last budget cycle, comprises part of the agency's annual premium. That amount is electronically transferred to SITF from the appropriations in an agency's budget. The Governor's proposed fiscal 2020 budget includes an $11.5 million appropriation for tort claims (including motor vehicle torts) under MTCA. The funds are to be transferred to SITF.

While an employee who committed child sexual abuse is likely not covered under MTCA, the Treasurer's Office advises that the State may still face liability through other causes of action (e.g., negligent hiring, retention, etc.). The Treasurer's Office advises that it has faced a few of these types of cases but has not faced any claims under the 2017 legislation. According to the Treasurer's Office, claims filed pursuant to the bill may be so old that it makes it extremely difficult for the office to conduct a proper investigation and defense of the claim. Other potential effects include litigation costs and an inability to reserve against future losses.

Local Expenditures: Local expenditures may increase if the bill results in payments in cases brought under the bill's provisions that would be barred under existing statute.

Whether such an increase occurs and the extent of any such increase cannot be reliably estimated at this time and does not occur until well into the future.

LGTCAs are the local government counterpart to MTCA. LGTCAs limit the liability of a local government to $400,000 per individual claim and $800,000 per total claims that arise from the same occurrence for damages from tortious acts or omissions (including intentional and constitutional torts). It further establishes that the local government is liable for tortious acts or omissions of its employees acting within the scope of employment, so long as the employee did not act with actual malice. A local government is not liable for punitive damages. Thus, LGTCAs prevent local governments from asserting a common law claim of governmental immunity from liability for such acts of its employees.

Some local governments covered under LGTCAs obtain insurance coverage through the Local Government Insurance Trust (LGIT), a self-insurer that is wholly owned by its member local governments. LGIT has historically advised that the types of causes of action affected by the bill are rarely filed against a local government employee or official.

County boards of education are not covered under LGTCAs. However, a county board of education may raise the defense of sovereign immunity to any amount claimed above the limit of its insurance policy or, if self-insured or a member of an insurance pool, above $400,000. A county board of education may not raise the defense of sovereign immunity to any claim of $400,000 or less. A county board employee acting within the scope of employment, without malice and gross negligence, is not personally liable for damages resulting from a tortious act or omission for which a limitation of liability is provided for the county board, including damages that exceed the limitation on the county board's liability.

The Maryland Association of Boards of Education advises that it does not anticipate significant increased liabilities arising from the bill.
